ABSTRACT

The college ERP system has a user-friendly interface for updating student, department, faculty, library, and other information. Every college has a number of departments and educational modules, such as courses, seminar halls, and so on. Managing all of these departments and other modules by hand is a tough, time-consuming, ineffective, and costly endeavor. As a result, we suggest a college ERP system. All of the information concerning information is stored in our college ERP system. The admin can add students, faculties, and other events to the students, teachers, events, libraries, departments, and other systems. Our technology allows a faculty member or a student to enter their attendance into a database, which can then be viewed by students and faculty members. Students enter and view their attendance on a computer. a separate login for each student For test preparation, the administrator can post timetables for several departments. The timetable is then posted on the web portal for faculties and students to view. These systems offer a simple user interface and a robust data management mechanism, making them extremely helpful.
